8:00 am – 9:30am Seminar Presentation

The focus of this month’s roundtable will elaborate on investing in green retrofit for underserved communities. Green retrofit is an approach to property development, rehabilitation, maintenance and operation that results in reduced energy demand, reduced water consumption, lower operating costs, improved resident quality of life, and reduced overall impact on the environment. Low income households and community developers often are unable to reap the savings and environmental and health benefits of greener buildings due to a lack of sufficient financing and information. To address this challenge, SDHF’s roundtable will discuss solutions to help organizations serving low income communities become more sustainable.

Moderator: Jennifer Green, California Center for Sustainable Energy
